The Provider's Source Update from the Adolescent Substance Abuse Treatment Project

"Building Bridges, Closing Gaps"

UPDATE

Free journal from NIDA for drug abuse researchers and providers

Have you signed up for NIDA's free journal, NIDA Science & Practice Perspectives? The peer-reviewed journal is written specifically for researchers and treatment providers.

You can receive the journal through email, through standard mail, or both. To sign up for the journal, go to <http://www.drugabuse.gov/Perspectives/index.html>. You can also access back issues of the journal at this website. Make sure to look at the article on adolescent co-occurring disorders in Volume 2, Number 1.

Check out this website!

www.intheknowzone.com— A useful site to use with your adolescent clients to see what they really know about drugs. It includes statistics, chemistry, long and short-term effects, street names, images, etc., of several different categories of drugs. There are quizzes you can use as pre and post-tests to see what clients know and what they have learned.
