

THE UNCG ENGLISH DEPARTMENT
SPEAKERS PROGRAM AND
THE ATLANTIC WORLD RESEARCH
NETWORK
PRESENT

---

JULIANA NFAH-
ABBENYI

Professor of English at
North Carolina State University

“THE WOMAN-GIRL CHILD
IN/AT WAR IN AFRICAN WOMEN’S WRITING”

MHRA 1215

Friday, 21 November 2008, 2:00 pm

Juliana Nfah-Abbenyi was born and raised in Cameroon. She was educated at the University of Yaounde, Cameroon, and McGill University in Montreal, Canada. She uses the pen name Makuchi, and is also literary critic. She is currently a professor of English at North Carolina State University, Raleigh. She is the author of Gender in African Women's Writing: Identity, Sexuality, and Difference and a book of short stories Your Madness, Not Mine: Stories of Cameroon. Her fiction has appeared in Callaloo: A Journal of African-American and African Arts and Letters, The Toronto Review of Contemporary Writing Abroad, Crab Orchard Review, Thamyris, Worldview and Asian Women. Her many scholarly publications include book chapters, articles, and essays in journals. Her work has been reprinted in such anthologies as The Anchor Book of Modern African Stories, Canadian Woman Studies: An Introductory Reader and African Gender Studies: A Reader.