The North Carolina Geographer is published annually by the North Carolina Geographical Society and serves as an outlet for articles and reviews relevant to the geography of the state. Submissions from geography faculty, students, and professionals in all geographic fields are welcome.

The journal publishes research articles, a Carolina Landscapes section, conference reports and book reviews, and articles related to the pedagogy of teaching about North Carolina.

Back issues of the journal can be found at http://core.ecu.edu/crawfordt/negs

Submissions in electronic form are encouraged, but initial submissions for review may be in hard copy. The North Carolina Geographer follows the APA referencing style used by the Annals of the Association of American Geographers. Text should be in .doc format with 1-inch margins, but please submit graphical figures and black and white photographs as separate .TIFF files to ensure the best reproduction in the journal.

Inquiries or materials may be submitted via electronic or postal delivery to:
