

Finding Free Video on the Web

Introduction

All video on the web is copyright unless otherwise indicated. However, you may link to a video or embed a video player. Many YouTube and Google Video clips have an embed tag for this purpose. Of course, you may also play these in class or send your students to a site to view these videos.

Educational video websites

Free Educational Videos on the Web

http://websearch.about.com/od/imagesearch/a/education_video.htm

Annotated list of links to educational video collections, some discipline-specific.

Academic Earth

<http://academicearth.org/>

“Thousands of video lectures from the world’s top scholars”

See also:

YouTube: <http://www.youtube.com>

Google Video: <http://video.google.com/>

PBS: <http://video.pbs.org/>

Library of Congress pilot YouTube Channel: <http://www.youtube.com/LibraryOfCongress>

Smithsonian Channel: <http://www.smithsonianchannel.com/site/smithsonian/home.do>

National Geographic: <http://video.nationalgeographic.com/video/index.html>

Open Video Project (UNC-CH) <http://www.open-video.org/>

Video Search Engines

These search engines are not focused on education but are rated the highest in recent reviews.

Veoh

<http://www.veoh.com>

Truveo

<http://www.truveo.com>

Blinkx

<http://www.blinkx.com>

