

American History to 1865

COURSE GUIDE

History 211.02

Spring 2002

Dr. L. Tolbert

Office Phone: 334-4646

Email address: lctolber@uncg.edu

Office: Mclver 210

Hours: Tues./Thurs 11:00-12:00
and by appointment

Scope of this Course

This course is designed to take you from the initial discovery and settlement of North America through the Civil War. We will explore major events and changes during the first four hundred years of American history, as a scattered collection of diverse colonies transformed themselves into a precarious union of states. Along the way, we'll study the impact of ordinary citizens as well as of famous individuals on the development of American society. Though we know the results of the major events of this period, it is important to keep in mind that the people who participated in the events we will study did not know what the consequences of their choices would be. One of the great challenges of studying history is trying to understand the past from the perspective of the people who lived it, rather than imposing our own present judgment on their choices.

Doing history requires much more than simply memorizing names and dates. In fact, there are many different kinds of history, and diverse, often conflicting, perspectives about what the past means. These different ways of understanding the past make the study of history more compelling than simply filling in blanks or listing endless facts. Therefore, beyond our investigation of what happened in the past, a primary goal of this course is to introduce you to skills used in the "historian's craft." These include recognizing the difference between primary and secondary sources, using library resources effectively, analyzing a variety of types of evidence, and constructing meaningful arguments.

Goals of this Course

By the end of the semester, you should not only be able to speak knowledgeably about major events and people in American history; you will also have mastered the basic analytical skills historians use in the practice of history. Specific course goals include the following:

- I. To evaluate the processes of change in the development of American society and culture before 1865. For each of the distinct periods we will study you should be able to:
 - A. Compare and contrast the experiences of different groups of North Americans based on factors such as race, class, gender, religious belief, ethnic origin, regional variation.
 - B. Assess the impact of ordinary citizens as well as of famous individuals on the development of American society.
 - C. Identify the major forces for historical change and critically evaluate the significant consequences of those changes for the development of American society.

- II. To acquire basic skills used by historians. By the end of the semester you should be able to:
 - A. Recognize the difference between facts and interpretations.
 - B. Critically analyze primary documents, keeping in mind the context in which they were produced.
 - C. Be able to identify thesis statements, recognize the ways that historians employ historical evidence to defend a thesis, and evaluate arguments presented by historians in scholarly secondary sources.
 - D. Assess differing interpretations of the same event or issue and form your own judgment based on evidence.
 - E. Present your judgment logically and clearly using specific evidence to support your position.

Required Text

Hollitz, John. Thinking Through the Past, Volume I To 1877. A Critical Thinking Approach to U.S. History. New York: Houghton Mifflin Company, 2001.

Evaluation

Attendance Policy

Faithful attendance is essential for your learning in this course. Therefore, beyond the part attendance plays in the overall participation grade, one point will be subtracted from the student's final grade for each absence after the first 3 Beyond even this penalty, a student who seriously neglects attendance and preparation risks failing the course.

Participation:	10%
Library Exercises	30%
Unit Tests	60%

Participation: 10%

This assessment will be based on three criteria:

1. Consistent attendance--This is not a traditional lecture course. We will be critically evaluating the content of the course resources and practicing the application of analytical skills during each class period. You will not be able to make up for your absences by copying someone else's notes. For this reason, consistent attendance is essential to your learning in this course. Please note that in addition to the penalty described above in the attendance policy, any absences beyond the first three will also lower your participation grade.
2. Thorough preparation for class--readings must be completed before class and assignments must be turned in on time. I will evaluate your preparedness from time to time through in-class writing assignments.
3. Regular contributions to class discussions--the success of this course for your learning depends on the quality of the discussion you engage in with your peers. Discussions will take place during every class meeting in both small group exercises and as a whole class.

Library Exercises: 30%

You will complete two library exercises (15% each) that will require you to identify and evaluate primary and secondary sources. Specific instructions will be provided well in advance of due dates (16 and 23 April).

Unit Tests: 60%

There will be three tests during the semester given at the end of each unit. These tests will require you to demonstrate your understanding of the major learning objectives for the unit. Tests will be take-home, short answer, and open-book format.

The tests are scheduled as follows:

Unit 1 – 12 February

Unit 2 – 21 March

Unit 3 – 2 May

Class Schedule

15 January Introductions

Unit 1: Colonial America

17-22 January Chapter 1. The Truth About Textbooks:
Indians and the Settlement of America

24-29 January Chapter 2. The Raw Materials of History:
Childhood in Puritan New England

31 January A Midwife's Tale

5-7 February Chapter 3. Evaluating Primary Sources:
Was Pennsylvania "The Best Poor Man's Country?"

12 February Unit 1 test

Unit 2: Revolution and Early Republic

14-19 February Chapter 4. Evaluating One Historian's Argument:
Loyalists and the Meaning of the Revolution

21-26 February Chapter 5. Motivation in History: Charles Beard and the Founding Fathers

28 Feb.–5 March Chapter 6. Ideas in History: Race in Jefferson's Republic

7 March Chapter 7. The Problem of Historical Causation:
The Second Great Awakening

12/14 March SPRING BREAK

19 March Chapter 7. The Problem of Historical Causation:
The Second Great Awakening

21 March Unit 2 Test

26-28 March Chapter 8. Grand Theory and History: Democracy and the Frontier

2-4 April Chapter 9. History as Biography: Historians and Old Hickory

9 April Library workshop

11-16 April	Chapter 10. History “From the Bottom Up”: Historians and Slavery Library Exercise #1 due 16 April.
18-23 April	Chapter 11. The Emergence of an Ideology: Antislavery and the Bounds of Womanhood Library Exercise #2 due 23 April.
25-30 April	Chapter 12. Grand Theory, Great Battles and Historical Causes: Why Secession Failed
2 May	Unit 3 Test