

American History to 1865

COURSE GUIDE

History 211

Spring 2003

Dr. L. Tolbert
Office Phone: 334-4646
Email address: lctolber@uncg.edu

Office: Mclver 210
Hours: Tues./Thurs 11:00-12:00
and by appointment

Scope of this Course

This course is designed to take you from the initial discovery and settlement of North America through the Civil War. We will explore major events and changes during the first four hundred years of American history, as a scattered collection of diverse colonies transformed themselves into a precarious union of states. Along the way, we'll study the impact of ordinary citizens as well as of famous individuals on the development of American society. Though we know the results of the major events of this period, it is important to keep in mind that the people who participated in the events we will study did not know what the consequences of their choices would be. One of the great challenges of studying history is trying to understand the past from the perspective of the people who lived it, rather than imposing our own present judgment on their choices.

Doing history requires much more than simply memorizing names and dates. In fact, there are many different kinds of history, and diverse, often conflicting, perspectives about what the past means. These different ways of understanding the past make the study of history more compelling than simply filling in blanks or listing endless facts. Therefore, beyond our investigation of what happened in the past, a primary goal of this course is to introduce you to skills used in the "historian's craft." These include recognizing the difference between primary and secondary sources, using library resources effectively, analyzing a variety of types of evidence, and constructing meaningful arguments.

Goals of this Course

By the end of the semester, you should not only be able to speak knowledgeably about major events and people in American history; you will also have mastered the basic analytical skills historians use in the practice of history. Specific course goals include the following:

I. To evaluate the processes of change in the development of American society and culture before 1865. For each of the distinct periods we will study you should be able to:

- A. Compare and contrast the experiences of different groups of North Americans based on factors such as race, class, gender, religious belief, ethnic origin, regional variation.
- B. Assess the impact of ordinary citizens as well as of famous individuals on the development of American society.
- C. Identify the major forces for historical change and critically evaluate the significant consequences of those changes for the development of American society.

II. To acquire basic skills used by historians. By the end of the semester you should be able to:

- A. Recognize the difference between facts and interpretations.
- B. Critically analyze primary documents, keeping in mind the context in which they were produced.
- C. Be able to identify thesis statements, recognize the ways that historians employ historical evidence to defend a thesis, and evaluate arguments presented by historians in scholarly secondary sources.
- D. Assess differing interpretations of the same event or issue and form your own judgment based on evidence.
- E. Present your judgment logically and clearly using specific evidence to support your position.

Required Text

Hollitz, John. Thinking Through the Past, Volume I To 1877. A Critical Thinking Approach to U.S. History. New York: Houghton Mifflin Company, 2001,

Attendance Policy

Faithful attendance is essential for your learning in this course. Therefore, beyond the part attendance plays in the overall participation grade, one point will be subtracted from the student's final grade for each absence after the first 3. Beyond even this penalty, a student who seriously neglects attendance and preparation risks failing the course.

Evaluation

Participation:	10%
Research Exercise	15%
Unit Tests	75%

Participation: 10%

This assessment will be based on three criteria:

1. Consistent attendance--This is not a traditional lecture course. We will be critically evaluating the content of the course resources and practicing the application of analytical skills during each class period. You will not be able to make up for your absences by copying someone else's notes. For this reason, consistent attendance is essential to your learning in this course.
2. Thorough preparation for class--readings must be completed before class and assignments must be turned in on time. I will evaluate your preparedness from time to time through a variety of in-class writing assignments.
3. Regular contributions to class discussions—the success of this course for your learning depends on the quality of the debate you engage in with your peers. Discussions will take place during every class meeting in both small group exercises and as a whole class. In order to create a good climate for everyone to participate, please follow these discussion guidelines:
 - ?? Be ready to share and explain your opinions. Feel free to disagree with others, but be specific in your own assertions and back them up with evidence.
 - ?? Listen carefully and respond to other members of the group. Be willing to change your mind when someone demonstrates an error in your logic and use of facts.
 - ?? Do not hesitate to ask for clarification of any point or term you do not understand.
 - ?? Make your point succinctly, avoid repetition, and stick to the subject.

Research Exercise: 15%

You will complete one research exercises that will require you to identify and evaluate primary and secondary sources. Specific instructions will be provided well in advance of the due date (10 April).

Unit Tests: 75% (25% each)

There will be three tests during the semester given at the end of each unit. These tests will require you to demonstrate your understanding of the major learning objectives for the unit. Tests will be a combination of short-answer and true/false, take-home, and open-book.

The tests are scheduled as follows:

Unit 1 – distributed in class on 11 February; test due at the beginning of class on 13 February

Unit 2 – distributed in class on 18 March; test due at the beginning of class on 20 March

Unit 3 – distributed on 1 May; test due by noon on 6 May

Class Schedule

14 January Introductions

Unit 1: Colonial America

16-21 January Chapter 1. The Truth About Textbooks:
Indians and the Settlement of America

23-28 January Chapter 2. The Raw Materials of History:
Childhood in Puritan New England

30 January A Midwife's Tale

4-6 February Chapter 3. Evaluating Primary Sources:
Was Pennsylvania "The Best Poor Man's Country?"

11 February Unit Review
Unit 1 test distributed

13 February No Class
Unit 1 test due

Unit 2: Revolution and Early Republic

18-20 February Chapter 4. Evaluating One Historian's Argument:
Loyalists and the Meaning of the Revolution

25-27 February Chapter 5. Motivation in History: Charles Beard and the Founding
Fathers

4-6 March Chapter 6. Ideas in History: Race in Jefferson's Republic

11/13 March SPRING BREAK

18 March Unit 2 Review
Unit 2 Test distributed

Unit 3: Antebellum United States

20 March Unit 3 Overview/ Research Exercise workshop
Unit 2 test due.

25-27 March Chapter 7. The Problem of Historical Causation:
The Second Great Awakening

1-3 April Chapter 8. Grand Theory and History: Democracy and the Frontier

8 April Views of a Vanishing Frontier

10-15 April Chapter 10. History “From the Bottom Up”: Historians and Slavery

10 April Research Exercise due

17-22 April Chapter 11. The Emergence of an Ideology:
Antislavery and the Bounds of Womanhood

24-29 April Chapter 12. Grand Theory, Great Battles and Historical Causes:
Why Secession Failed

1 May Unit 3 Review/Course Evaluations
Unit 3 Test distributed

6 May Unit 3 Test due