Course Description

Russia today is one of the most influential countries in the world, and it has had a fascinating and difficult history. The primary goal of this course is to introduce students to the issues and debates raised in that history from its origins in roughly the 9th century until the eve of the 20th century. We will examine Russia's history, as much as possible, from the point of view of those living it, trying to understand events through their eyes and to thereby acquire a fuller understanding of Russia today.

The course is divided into two sections: Early Russia to 1700; and Imperial Russia 1700-1900. Relying on primary historical sources, we will approach the subject material from several perspectives, including political, social, economic, and cultural, with a number of themes in mind: state and society; ideology/religion; family/gender; class; war and peace, and others as well.

Goals & Objectives

By the end of the class students will understand, firstly, that history is not just the memorization of dates and facts, but rather the interpretation of the past; and, secondly, that we tend to see Russia and the world through a number of basic assumptions that are not always accurate. Students will take from the class the skills to critically appraise varying historical arguments and to clearly express their own interpretations.

Readings:

Nikolai Gogol, Inspector General

Dmitrii Ivanovich Rostislavov, Provincial Russia in the Age of Enlightenment: The Memoir of a Priest's Son

Ivan Turgenev, Fathers and Sons

Reserve articles and online material designated below

Optional: MacKenzie-Curran, A History of Russia, the Soviet Union & Beyond

Course Web Page: The course web page is at www.uncg.edu/~jwjones/russia

The page has course readings, summaries of the notes, a timeline, and other features relevant to the course.

Assignments:

Participation	25 %
Research Assignment	15 %
Midterm Exam	30 %
Final Exam	30 %

Participation: Your 25% class participation grade consists of several worksheets to be turned in at the beginning of the class periods designated below; and several Reaction Pieces, 1-2 pages double-spaced. These are intended to be your reaction to or opinion of the assigned readings designated below, not a summary of the reading material. The total sum of these assignments is 50 points, which will be divided by two for the final participation grade.

Exams: There is a midterm exam and a final exam (each worth 30%) for the class. The exams cover only the part of the course for which they are designated (Midterm: Early Russia-1700; Final: Imperial Russia 1700-1900), so they are not cumulative. Each exam includes a Take Home Essay, worth 10% of the overall exam grade, the topic for which will be distributed prior to the exam, with the essay to be turned in on exam day.

Research Assignment: The Research Assignment (worth 15%) requires you to define the issues and arguments involved in a topic of historiographical debate related to the course, i.e. the nature of early Slavic society and culture; the impact of the Mongols in Russian history; the role of Ivan the Terrible, Peter the Great, Catherine the Great, or some other ruler in Russian history; the rise of capitalism in Russia, etc. For the assignment (double-spaced, 5-7 pages), you should summarize the opposing sides of an historical debate for a topic chosen ahead of time and approved by the instructor, identifying at least 3-5 major books or articles on that topic in a bibliography. The assignment is due Monday, November 29, but can be turned in at any point of the semester after September 15th; be forewarned: we have a lot of reading toward the end of the semester, so you need to work on this assignment well before it is due.

Grading: Grades are compiled on a point system. For example, if you make 80 on the midterm (16/20) + 87 on the midterm Take Home Essay (8.7/10) + 88 on participation (22/25) + 85 on the Research Assignment (12.8/15) + 84 on the final exam (16.8/20) + 90 on the final Take Home Essay (9/10) your final grade = 85.3 or B. Keep up with your grades on the chart at the end of the syllabus to know what grade you have going into the Final Exam.
