

History 611
Seminar in American History
Fall Semester 2001
Robert M. Calhoon

This seminar will meet five times: September 5, 12, and 19 and November 7 and 14 from 4-5:30 in McIver 230B.

Throughout the semester, students will work with their mentors on their research papers. The mentors will assign grades in 611.

During September, the Seminar will discuss the following articles that are available on electronic reserve in the Library Reserve Department.

Cornelia Dayton, "Taking the Trade: "Abortion and Gender Relations in an 18th Century New England Village," William and Mary Quarterly, 1991

Richard Buel, "Democracy and the American Revolution: A Frame of Reference," William and Mary Quarterly, 1964

Gregory Massey, "The British Expedition to Wilmington, January-November 1781," North Carolina Historical Review, 1989.

Bertram Wyatt-Brown, "The Anti-Mission Movement in the Jacksonian South: A Study in Regional Folk Culture," Journal of Southern History, 1970

Scott Culclasure, " 'I Have Killed a Damned Dog': Murder by a Poor White in the Antebellum South," North Carolina Historical Review, 1993

Edwin Phifer, "Slavery in Burke County, North Carolina," North Carolina Historical Review, 1962

Members of the Seminar should read these articles prior to the September 5 meeting.
