Welcome to this class! In History 329, I hope to familiarize you with all the major topics in Women's History since the end of the Civil War. To do so we will focus on diverse subjects such as politics, race, gender, economics and culture, all the while attempting to understand how historical events touched the lives of women. We will view History not as a random list of dates and events, but more of a narrative of inter-related events.

Required Texts:

Women in the American Experience* by Nancy Woloch, second edition.

Women and Power in American History, from 1870*, by Kathryn Sklar, second edition.

Both should be available at the University bookstore, or check Amazon for bigger bargains.

Grading Policies and Breakdown:

Two Term Exams	50% (25% each)
Papers & Presentations	40% (20% each)
Class Participation & Attendance	10%

As this is a three-hundred level class, the basis of the course will be your interpretations of the class material. Each student will give two presentations during the semester on an assigned topic and/or reading. A short paper will be handed in at each presentation. Class discussion is also vital at this level, and I will expect students to participate at all times! This topic is open to much interpretation, and I assure you, all opinions will be valued and discussed.

More conventionally, the two term exams will be a combination of short answer and short essay. They will be based both on the lectures and the assigned readings.

Attendance Policy:

As this is a discussion format course, class attendance is essential. Attendance will be taken each class session by sign up sheet. Class participation points will be a combination of both your attendance and your participation in lecture discussions. No points will be deducted for four (4) unexcused absences; beyond that your participation grade will suffer a ten-point deduction for each class missed. After seven unexcused absences, I reserve the right to drop you from the course for non-attendance.
