Adam and Enoch: Vying Paradigms for Explaining Evil

Monday, February 19, 2007
7:30pm

Elliott Auditorium

Reception to Follow

Michael Stone, Gail Levin de Nur Professor of Religious Studies at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, and Distinguished Visiting Professor of Religious Studies at UNC-Charlotte this academic year, will consider the challenges that face both Jewish and Christian scholars of Judaism in the ancient world. Stone will examine the widespread presuppositions that have impacted Jewish and Christian perceptions of Judaism in the Second Temple period and explore the decisive importance of this period for our understanding of ancient Judaism.
